Since 1977, a number of vessels have served in the Sea Shepherd fleet to protect the world’s marine wildlife. Sea Shepherds best known campaigns have taken place in the remote and hostile waters of the Southern Ocean where our ships have saved thousands of whales from being harpooned in an internationally recognised whale sanctuary. Today, Sea Shepherd ships continue to patrol the world’s oceans performing research and carrying out direct action tactics in order to uphold international conservation law and DEFEND, CONSERVE, PROTECT the remaining biodiversity in our oceans.

SMALL VESSELS

Many small vessels and watercraft serve as the Sea Shepherd’s primary tool in fighting species extermination campaigns. These small craft are launched from our bigger vessels, and have the speed and manoeuvrability to keep up with and intercept whaling and fishing vessels. Regardless of the full type, every vessel flying the Sea Shepherd colours will continue to strive for legal sea patrol and trepidation in the hearts of those who engage in illegal whaling, fishing, and other destructive marine activities.

In 2000 Sea Shepherd donated their former U.S. Coast Guard patrol boat, USS Seneca (jess hospita), to the Galapagos National Park, regasified to prevent the DNF from illegal fishing activities.

Sea Shepherd’s current fleet of small craft includes the Drift, a coastal patrol boat, a block ship, and the Ocean Alliance vessel, Block Island, funded by the Drift’s success.
